engineering Category: Sound production technology Synopsis The Author The Premise Based on a true story. The Love THUNDERBIRDS is a film about a special relationship and how it can sustain even the most tumultuous of situations. Karatina Ruttiman is a pop music superstar from Sri Lanka. She's yet to make a dent in the American market, but she's endured five years of running around the world, demanding high praise, from UK radio stations to BBC radio studios. She's getting there, with her only real hiccup being the fact that her band mates bicker and grow too big for their britches. But then they're all whisked off to New York to play at a festival, and though the other members of her band are excited to re-enter the US market, Karatina is not. In fact, she's put off by the idea of returning home, to her father and old friends, to tell them about the house she's bought in Wales. Cameron Russell has been living in America for a long time. He's already a successful recording artist, and he's never wanted to return to his small town in south Wales, where he's felt isolated most of his life. When he meets Karatina, he thinks he's struck gold again. He doesn't know that Karatina has been living a lonely, isolated life in a third floor walk-up in New York City, since the death of her parents, and that she's struck gold not just in the touring musician she's met, but in the potential love interest
